J. A. DAVIDSON HAS RESIGNED

Chairman of County Commissioners Leaves The Board.

THREE CITIZENS MENTIONED AS HIS SUCCESSORS—APPOINTMENT OF C. A. WHARTON PROBABLE—ROUTINE MATTERS RECEIVE ATTENTION—JURIES DRAWN.

When the County Commissioners met in regular session yesterday morning, all being present except Chairman J. A. Davidson, a letter was handed Commissioner W. C. Tucker, who had been made temporary chairman, from Mr. Davidson, in which his resignation as a commissioner was set forth. Mr. Davidson stated that pressure of private business made the step necessary; that he could not attend to his private business and devote to the official business the time that it needed and was unwilling to hold a position to which he could not give the time the office demanded. In handing in his resignation, which he requested become effective at once, Mr. Davidson expressed his good wishes for the success of the members of the board in carrying forward the work of the county, epsecially regarding good roads.

The resignation was accepted and resolutions were adopted, expressing the thanks of the board to Mr. Davidson for his past services to the county and also their regret at losing him. Mr. Davidson had been a member of the Board of Commissioners for a number of years and was thoroughly familiar with the affairs of the county.

Superior Court Clerk Forbis was notified of the vacancy on the board and requested to appoint a commissioner. Mr. Forbis was in consultation with the board yesterday afternoon and will hand in his appointment this morning. It is understood that Cyrus A. Wharton, of the eastern part of the county, will be the appointee. When seen yesterday afternoon Mr. Forbis would not say whom he had decided upon. However, it is known that T. A. Wilson, C. L. Sockwell and Cyrus A. Wharton were the men most prominently mentioned and it is believed that Mr. Wharton will be the appointee.

The Auditorium Company submitted a proposition for the county to take over the building and use it for county purposes, this proposition being similar to one submitted about a year ago. No action was taken, but from the expressions of the commissioners it is believed that the proposition will be declined.

At the request of officials of the Central Carolina Fair Association the commissioners issued orders to the sheriff to refuse to grant license to any circus, menagerie or like organization for performances in the county between September 15 and October 28.

The major portion of the day was devoted to routine matters such as auditing accounts and approving bills. In the afternoon three juries were drawn as follows:

For criminal term beginning April 3 and lasting one week:

CITY DIVIDED TWO PRECINCTS

For Commission Election--Election Officers Appointed.

The Board of Aldermen met in adjourned session last night for the purpose of electing registrars and judges of election for the coming primary and general election for the election of commissioners, provided under the new charter.

The city was divided into two precincts, Elm street being the dividing line. J. H. Rankin was elected registrar for the west side, to be known as Morehead precinct, and J. W. McNairy for the east side, to be known as Gilmer precinct. A judge was elected from each ward for each of the precincts, as follows: Morehead—J. W. Coppedge, J. B. Minor, J. R. Donnell, J. T. Hunt, J. R. Pitts, R. A. Gilmer. Gilmer—A. A. Chandler, H. W. Wharton, Frank A. Brooks, L. M. Clymer, J. F. Troxler, Henry Phipps.

An ordinance was passed selecting the city hall as the voting place for Morehead and the Eagle Hose Company's hall as the voting place for Gilmer. The registration, which will be a new one on account of the dividing the city into two precincts, will be at the polling places and the books will be opened on the last Monday in March and each succeeding day, Sundays excepted, until the second Saturday before the election. All books must be turned over to the city clerk immediately after the registration closes. The registrars must keep separate books for white and colored voters. All voters living east of Elm street will register and vote at the Eagle Hose Company hall, while all voters living on the west side of Elm street will register and vote at the city hall.

The same registrars and judges were elected for the general primary also. The primary will be held on April 24 and the candidates nominated in the primary will be the candidates for the general election on May 2.

Mr. Dan Corl appeared before the board regarding his sidewalk on North Davie. It seems that in the block between Gaston and Mebane street the sidewalk is ten feet while elsewhere on the street the sidewalk is only eight feet. Mr. Corl wanted to set his fence so his sidewalk would be uniform. A committee, composed of Aldermen Clendenin, Glascock and Albright, was appointed to investigate and report at the meeting Friday afternoon.

MUNICIPAL COURT NOTES.

Earl Stevenson was arraigned in Municipal Court yesterday morning on the charge of retailing, there being two cases against him. Stevenson is the man arrested at the passenger station Saturday night just as he was in the act of making a sale. In one case he was fined $25 and costs, while judgment was suspended on payment of costs during good behavior in the other.

Joe Butler, who was taken in Saturday night for beating a ride on a Southern passenger train, was given a hearing. Judge Eure sent him to the roads for a period of twenty days.

Jim Huffines, who was fined $25 and costs for retailing last week, was before the court preliminary to going to the roads. At the last minute his father came up with the fine and promised to bring in the costs in a few days. The court gave him a couple of days to pay the costs and the defendant was released.

ALBRIGHT AND FOUSHEE FOR COMMISSIONERS

Alderman J. Ed. Albright stated to a reporter last night that he had decided to become a candidate for the office of Commissioner of Public Works. It is understood that J. Giles Foushee will also be a candidate for this office. W. T. Sergeant, who has been connected with the Water & Light Commission since it was organized, has not yet decided to enter the race. Mr. Albright stated that he had waited to see if Mr. Sergeant was going to run before deciding to become a candidate.

Royster, of this city, will speak on "Over Three Million and Twenty-Three Cents." A number of short talks will follow.

The Pythians of the city are asked to meet in the hall of No. 80 at 7:30 o'clock and go out on the next car.

Meeting Art Department Woman's Club.

The meeting of the art department of the Woman's Club today promises to be one of the most interesting of the series of studies of American galleries.

The time will be devoted to the Metropolitan Museum of Art. Mrs. Marshall will give its history and describe it in detail. Mrs. Gregory will take up the old masters exhibited there and Miss Wyche some of the pictures by later foreign artists. Beside these full and accurate descriptions, many views of the building and copies of the paintings will be shown and a more thorough artistic appreciation of its value could scarcely be gained by a real visit.

So extensive is the study of the pictures particularly, that those of English and American artists had to be left for a later meeting.

SPEAKS MAY BE SENT TO CRIMINAL INSANE WARD

Hudson & Swift, counsel for Moses Speaks, the High Point murderer, are at work to have Speaks sent to the criminal insane department of the State prison without the necessity of an expensive trial, the result of which, it is conceded by nearly everybody, will be either second degree murder or nothing. Inasmuch as Speaks has been in an asylum three times and is now an escaped inmate of the asylum for the insane it is argued that a jury could not be selected that would convict him of murder in the first degree. County Attorney Wilson states that he would be unwilling to prosecute the defendant on this charge in view of the above facts.

COUNTY COURT FOR GUILFORD

Senator Hobgood offered a bill providing for the nomination of State officers and United States senators by a State primary. It was referred to a committee and may be called tomorrow.

The Senate.

President Newland convened the Senate at 10:30 o'clock, Rev. H. M. North, of Edenton Street Methodist church, offering prayer.

New bills were introduced by McDonald to regulate the number of pages and laborers of the general assembly, reducing the number from 24 to 10 pages and the number of laborers from 24 to 10. Long: Authorize the North Carolina & Virginia Railroad of North Carolina to sell its property to the North Carolina and Virginia Railroad of Virginia.

Eighty bills, nearly all of them purely local, were ratified up to No. 1,114. Bills of interest ratified were:

Club Liquor Bill Passed.

Senator McLaughlin, chairman of the committee on propositions and grievances, reported a substitute for the Brown bill to prohibit the handling of intoxicating liquors by clubs, the substitute being almost identical with the bill heretofore passed by the House.

Senator Boyden entered a vigorous protest against any more legislation along this line. Senators Hartsell, McLaughlin and Thorne advocated the committee substitute, explaining that is does not prohibit any club member from keeping his own liquor in a locker at his club and giving a drink to any of his friends, but does prohibit the club from keeping and serving liquor to its members or others. After a full discussion the committee substitute was adopted and passed and sent to the House.

Constitutional Amendments Bill Held Up.

Senator Sikes' bill to amend the constitution of North Carolina was reported without prejudice and Senator Pharr moved that it be tabled in view of the fact that not sufficient time is left in which to duly consider it. He withdrew his motion at the request of Senator Sikes and consideration was postponed with the hope that the Senate will find time to dispose of it.

Bills Passed.

Senator Bassett's bill to protect persons who make sales of merchandise on approval; the bill to regulate mining in North Carolina carrying an annual appropriation of $3,500; Senator Graham's bill relative to the liability of the initial carrier in the transportation of freight (a copy of the Carmack amendment to the Hepburn act of Congress); Senator Graham's joint resolution to protect the capitol from fire by increasing the annual appropriation from $600 to $1,000, and Senator London's bill to codify the law as to mental anguish for delay in the transmission of telegrams passed and were sent to the House.

The joint resolution providing for the appointment of a commission to consider the advisability of consolidating the agricultural department and the A. & M. College passed and was sent back to the House for concurrence in the Senate amendment, which adds the president of the Senate and the speaker of the House to the commission.

The House.

Speaker Dowd convened the House at 9 o'clock, Rev. Dr. Wilcox, of Raleigh, offering the prayer. A rollcall showed 88 members in their seats.

The appropriations bill coming from the Senate with the amendment tacked on Saturday night for giving the Soldier's Home $40,000 instead of $30,000 was not concurred in, the statement of Chairman Turlington of the appropriations committee, being that the man-

A country club for Greensboro is assured.

A preliminary meeting had been held some time ago and a committee of 12 appointed to investigate certain properties and report, this report being handed in last night.

As a result of the meeting the report was adopted as submitted, conditioned on the extension of the car line out North Elm to the club grounds. The following committee was selected to have entire charge of the purchase of the property, the preliminary organization of the club and to call a meeting as soon as the plans are perfected for a permanent organization: E. The directors of the Public Service Company will be asked to assure the extension of the car line and as soon as this is done the property will be purchased.

As soon as the deal is closed work will be commenced at once. It is the purpose of the membership to erect a $5,000 club house and have a golf course, tennis courts and other forms of amusement. There are at present seventy-one members and it is hoped to increase this number to one hundred before the organization is perfected. The membership fee is $100, payable in equal monthly installments of $10.

The clubs will be open for the entire year and will be of great benefit to the members, for while it will possess the charms of a country place it will lie within two miles of the heart of the city.

The defendant above named will take notice that an action entitled as above has been commenced in the Superior Court of Guilford County; that said action is for divorce absolute; and the said defendant will further take notice that he is required to appear at the term of court beginning Feb. 27, 1911, of the Superior Court of said county, at the court house of said county, in Greensboro, N. JAMES W. FORBIS,

Dolliver and the Dahlias.

The dahlia is a flower that is almost sacred to Scandinavians. When the late Senator Dolliver was speaking to a Swedish settlement from the rear end of a Pullman car a bunch of dahlias was handed to him, and he bowed his thanks, while the crowd roared its applause for the orator and for the bouquet.

"What kind of flowers are these?" inquired Senator Dolliver of Senator Clapp of Minnesota.

"American Beauties, I guess," replied Senator Clapp.

Dolliver knew better than that, so he heartily thanked the people for their attention, applause and splendid flowers.

When they met in Washington after the campaign Senator Dolliver said to the Minnesota man: "Clapp, you would have had me mobbed if I hadn't been prudent. If I had called those dahlias American Beauties those Swedes would have been for killing me."

"Yes," said Senator Clapp, "they are good people and generally do the right thing."—Minneapolis Journal.

Why He Wept.

A man who was walking through a train inadvertently left the door of one of the cars open. A big man sitting in a seat in the middle of the car yelled: "Shut the door, you fool! Were you raised in a barn?"

The man who had left the door open closed it and then, dropping into a seat, buried his face in his hands and began to weep. The big man looked somewhat uncomfortable and, rising, finally walked up to the weeper and tapped him on the shoulder.

"My friend," he said, "I didn't intend to hurt your feelings. I just wanted you to close the door."

The man who was weeping raised his head and grinned. "Old man," he said, "I'm not crying because you hurt my feelings, but because you asked me if I was raised in a barn. The sad fact is that I was raised in a barn, and every time I hear an ass bray it makes me homesick."—Louisville Times.

The Speedier Way.

He simply couldn't help it. He was born lazy.

As a rule, if not too sleepy, he could get through a shave in about thirty-five minutes. But today, after only fourteen hours' sleep, he appeared even more sluggish than ever. As he applied the lather to his customer's beard his brush lingered haltingly, as though loath to leave the stubby chin to which it was being applied.

His customer was a patient man and stood this for a considerable while. But at last his patience began to ooze, and he interrupted a forty winks' interval with a cough.

"S'ere, lad," he suggested, "Aa've an idea. Hold your hand, keep tha brush still, an' aa'll wag ma head for ye!"—London Answers.

A Fierce Night Alarm

is the hoarse, startling cough of a child, suddenly attacked by croup. Often it aroused Lewis Chamblin of Manchester, O., (R. R. No. 2) for their four children were greatly subject to croup. "Sometimes in severe attacks," he wrote "we were afraid they would die, but since we proved what a certain remedy Dr. King's New Discovery is, we have no fear. We rely on it for croup and for coughs, colds or any throat or lung trouble." So do thousands of others. So may you. Asthma, Hay Fever, LaGrippe, Whooping Cough, Hemorrhages fly before it, 50c. and $1.00. Trial bottle free. Sold by Fariss-Klutz Drug Co.

What "Hamlet" Lacked.

In a mining camp town "Hamlet" was one evening given by a strolling company, and this is the criticism that appeared next day in the local papers, written by the miner dramatic critic:

"There is too much chinning in this piece. The author is behind the times and seems to forget that what we want nowadays is hair raising situations and detectives.

"In the hands of a skillful playwright a detective would have been put upon the track of Hamlet's uncle, and the old man would have been hunted down in a manner that would have lifted the audience out of their cowhides.

"The moral of the piece is not good. The scene where Hamlet sasses his mother is a very bad example to the rising generation.

"Our advice to the author is more action, more lovemaking and plenty of specialties. The crazy girl scene should be cut out altogether and a rattling good song and dance substituted."

Charles V. at Table.

Emperor Charles V. of Austria, by far the most powerful ruler of his day, was thus described as he appeared at table by Roger Ascham, secretary to the English ambassador, in 1550: "I stood hard by the emperor's table. He had four courses; he had sod beef—very good—roast mutton, baked hare; tuese be no service in England. The emperor hath a good face, a constant look; he fed well of a capon; I have had a better from mine hostess Barnes many times in my chamber. He and Ferdinando, king of the Romans, ate together very handsomely, carving themselves where they list, without any curiosity. The emperor drank the best that ever I saw; he had his head in the glass five times as long as any of us and never drank less than a good quart at once of Rhenish wine." It was notorious that the emperor ate and drank immoderately, and as a natural result he suffered terribly from gout from the time he was thirty years old.

Game to the Last.

Douglas MacDonald and his old crony, Donald MacDougal, were once opposed to each other in a famous curling match, and the last two stones to finish the game were the two cronies'. Donald MacDougal, with enormous deliberation, threw his stone. He threw it well. He made what is called a pat lid and jumped for joy. Then it was Douglas MacDonald's turn. His case seemed hopeless, but such a splendid throw did he make that the pat lid was knocked off, and his stone lay at the side of the tee, winning the game. In his joy the old fellow jumped sky high. He came down so hard that he broke right through the ice. He sank, but, bobbing up again, he shouted from the cold water:

"Hi, lads, we've won, and if I dinna come oot o' here alive be sure ye pit that stone on my grave!"—Exchange.

Thought It Was a Joke.

The Colonel—And you actually assert that you want to marry my daughter? Fusby—Y-yes. The Colonel (staring at him unpleasantly)—You know I am English. Fusby—Y-yes, sir. The Colonel—Well, it's going to take me several years to see the point of your little joke. Good day to you.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Best Asleep.

"I don't feel well," said one clerk to another as he took off his coat in the office. "The trouble with me is that I haven't slept as I ought. I don't feel well unless I've slept." "That's the same way with me," said his colleague. "In fact, I think I feel best of all when I'm sound asleep!"

The Haughty Cook.

"My dear, will you kindly ask that haughty cook of ours to stew some tripe I brought home? I haven't the nerve."

"Where is the tripe?"

The Very Idea!

Mr. Woggs—I'm through with Bump. I told him we are going to name our baby after some great personage and asked him for a suggestion. Mrs. Woggs—What did he say? Mr. Woggs—He said, "Name it after ours."—Puck.

How Could He?

Aunt—You will never learn how to manager your money, Karl. Nephew—Can you wonder at it, auntie? My acquaintance with it is always so short.—Fliegende Blatter.

THE SCRAPPY OSTRICH.

He Is Full of Treachery and Dearly Loves to Fight.

Those who manage ostrich farms declare that much diplomacy is required in the handling of the ostrich, which in more respects than one is a decidedly queer bird.

The ostrich requires, aside from other necessary qualifications, a master's hand, a strict hand, tempered by justice and mercy. Not that the ostrich is at all appreciative of kindness. Indeed, he never becomes thoroughly domesticated, say those who know him in captivity.

On the contrary, the ostrich is haughtily and stolidly irresponsive to kindness, and so treacherous is he when full grown that even his daily attendants never approach him unless equipped with the necessary appliances to bring him to terms when in an ugly or dangerous mood.

The ostrich's chief object in life seems to be to fight on every possible occasion. Indeed, a fight to him is the very spice of things.

The male ostrich is not without commendable qualities, however. For instance, he mates but once and forever.

Should he, as often happens in the course of a domestic complication, kick his mate to death he remains true and constant to her memory, never seeking a successor. In the ordinary phases of domesticity he is attentive and helpful. He digs the whole in the ground that is to serve as a nest, and during the process of incubation, which continues for forty days, he relieves the mother bird of her duties from early evening till late the next morning.

A curious habit of the male ostrich is his "constitutional." At sunrise and just before twilight the male birds line up in single file and race around the inclosure at whirlwind speed until thoroughly limbered up. Then, suddenly arranging themselves in sets, they execute a grotesque minuet with ludicrous gravity.—Harper's Weekly.

PORSON'S FOIBLE.

The Drink He Got From Mrs. Hoppner's Private Bottle.

In "Samuel Rogers and His Circle" is this anecdote about Richard Porson, the famous classical scholar and professor of Greek:

When Hoppner, the painter, was residing in a cottage a few miles from London, Porson one afternoon suddenly arrived there. Hoppner said that he could not offer him dinner, as Mrs. H. had gone to town and had carried with her the key of the closet which contained the wine. Porson declared, however, that he would be content with a mutton chop and beer from the next alehouse and accordingly stayed to dine.

During the evening Porson said, "I am quite certain that Mrs. Hoppner keeps some nice bottle for her private drinking in her own bedroom, so pray try if you can lay your hands on it." His host assured him that Mrs. H. had no such secret stores; but, Porson insisting that a search should be made, a bottle was at last discovered in the lady's apartment, to the surprise of Hoppner and the joy of Porson, who soon finished its contents, pronouncing it to be the best gin he had tasted for a long time.

Next day Hoppner, somewhat out of temper, informed his wife that Porson had drunk every drop of her concealed dram. "Drunk every drop of it!" cried she. "Heaven above, it was spirits of wine for the lamp!"

A Funny Chase.

Lord Orford, an eccentric English nobleman, once had a team of red deer stags that he frequently drove to a light coach. All went well until one day there happened to be a pack of staghounds on the road from London to Brighton, along which Lord Orford's picturesque team was merrily fleeting. There followed the strangest chase that ever mortal man witnessed. The hounds hunted the team and its owner hard to Newmarket, and with such a smash into the Ram inn yard the whole lot went that there was no more coach left and little more of driver. Lord Orford took to horses after that.

An Inscription by Charles Lamb.

My friend's uncle had in his early days been a fellow clerk with Charles Lamb. I remember his showing me a book which had been given him by Lamb, with a very lamblike inscription. It was a "Table of Interest," and on the flyleaf was written:

"William Thomas Keith, from Charles Lamb. In this book, unlike most others, the further you progress the more the interest increases."—Edmund Yates.

Two Showers.

"Cute people out in the town where my cousin Jane lives. A popular girl got married there, and her rejected suitors clubbed together and gave her a mitten shower."

"Good. And what did they give the lucky bridegroom?"

"They gave him a shower of bricks."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Lawyer's Point of View.

"It costs more," said a prominent Bostonian, "to get divorced than it costs to get married."

"Maybe so," said the lawyer as he took the big check, "but it's worth more, isn't it?"—Boston Po

The Scrap Book

Entirely Too Liberal.

Every once in a while a new campaign story yet bobs up in Washington. This one is on Ralph Cole, Ohio member of congress, who did his best to make his destrict go Republican, but who cannot point to any particularly howling success in that regard. At one town in his district he was to divide his time with a local spellbinder. The local man spoke first and was to have kept going for half an hour, but he made it an hour and a half. When he got through he made an apology for encroaching on Cole's time.

"It reminds me," Cole said, as he faced his audience, "of what I once heard in a courtroom. The defendant had been found guilty of a criminal charge. The judge sentenced him to fifteen years. 'Have you anything to say?' demanded the court of the prisoner. 'Nothing but this,' was the reply. 'I think you're mighty d—— liberal with another man's time.'"

Then Cole turned loose and coaxed back the departing audience by the flow of his wonderful oratory.—Cincinnati Times-Star.

Thy Purpose.

One and only must thy purpose be,
Whole and decided.
From giant force but pygmy deed wouldst see
Were it divided.

Thou must at once thy choice forever make,
For strife or pleasure;
Must choose the kernel or the husk to take—
Repent at leisure.

Some seek for pearls, others for bubbles mere,
On life's sea cruising.
Complain not if the bubble disappear.
'Twas thine own choosing.

Father's Fairy Tales.

During an entertainment period which followed the business session of a woman's club one afternoon recently some of the gentlemen who called for their wives were asked to tell some stories. The husband of the hostess begged to be excused.

"It's something that I seldom do," he exclaimed, "and I am afraid I'd make a sad failure."

The little daughter of the host and hostess was on her feet in an instant.

"Oh, papa, how you talk!" she exclaimed. "I heard mamma say only last night that you had a new yarn to tell every time you came home late at night from the office."—Youngstown Telegram.

The Winning Trick.

A tricky lawyer was defending a man in a promissory note case, and he knew he was going to lose. But in the lunch hour in his tricky way he sneaked back into the courtroom and changed the markers in all the prosecuting counsel's reference book. The judge after consulting all these reference books two hours later pronounced sternly:

"I should certainly have decreed for the plaintiff, but on referring to the citations quoted by plaintiff's counsel I find that they none of them bears even remotely on the case before us, and I incline to think that a gross insult has been perpetrated on this court. Counsel, with idiotic levity, has referred me to the action of a Frenchman who sued a zoological society for having been bitten by a bear. The second reference is to a case of slander. Next I am directed to a forged will and a safe robbing. What have these things to do with an action to recover on a promissory note? But perhaps the most shameless insult to this court lies in counsel's final reference to the notorious Lippman versus Henshaw case, the silliest and most ribald breach of promise suit in all the annals of western jurisprudence. Judgment for defendants, with costs."

His Awful Experience.

A man who had been shipwrecked and then cast up on the Jersey coast, where he lay a whole day before he revived sufficiently to summon help, was receiving the sympathy and congratulations of his friends on his recovery.

"You must have had a terrible experience with no food and mosquitoes swarming around you," said one of them.

"You just bet I had a terrible experience," the saved one acknowledged. "My experience was worse than that of the man who wrote 'Water, water everywhere, but not a drop to drink.' With me it was bites, bites everywhere, but not a bite to eat."

Taking No Risks.

Henry Irving was intensely interested in criminology, and on one occasion this hobby of the famous actor made it rather awkward for one of his friends.

The two men were walking together on a lonely moor. The friend was a very nervous man, and unfortunately at a very desolate spot Mr. Irving glanced round and exclaimed, "What an ideal spot for a murder!

"Now, suppose I murdered you here," Mr. Irving went on. The other started violently, but Mr. Irving was already deep in his nefarious schemes and paid little attention to the other's obvious dissatisfaction with the subject of conversation. Nobody, Mr. Irving explained, would ever be able to trace the murderer, and he explained at great length how he could cover up his tracks.

"Don't you think it might be done?" he asked, turning again to his companion. But his companion was disappearing in the far distance as fast as his legs could carry him.

WHERE HIS THOUGHTS WERE

The mother of the first child went into the nursery and found her husband gazing earnestly upon the baby, Overcome by this evidence of tender father-love, tears filled her eyes. Her arms stole softly about his neck. He started at her touch, murmuring dreamily, Dearest, I can't understand how they can sell this crib for only $8.00.

COST OF LIVING GOING DOWN.

What Frank Stanton of the Atlanta Constitution would refer to as the "hallelujah time" is about to break over this country with all the effulgence of the summer sunlight, according to advices received from the men who largely control the food supplies of this country. In other words, the cost of living is on the downward glide. Here is the concensus of opinion of the packers and dealers in food supplies in Chicago, the headquarters of the meat trust and grain market manipulators who have been charged with responsibility for the high prices of food produets and the consequent aviation stunts of the cost of living:

"The packers and other manufacturers of food supplies in Chicago are unanimous in the belief that the big decline in provisions and foodstuffs which began early last fall and was given a terrific shove down the toboggan by the Democratic landslide is to continue for an indefinite period.

"The great corn crop of last year, more than 3,000,000,000 bushels, was responsible for the start of it all. The crop was fully 300,000,000 bushels more than ever harvested before. "Provision prices follow corn," is a trade saying. Corn, which sold a year ago at 70 cents a bushel is now 42 cents. Hogs declined from 10 to 7 cents. Beef likewise fell 30 per cent., for corn goes into the product of beef and pork. Mutton, bacon, lamb and poultry went down. Butter and eggs have declined 30 per cent., all due to King Corn. There was plenty of corn feed for hens all winter, and they became so industrious in the egg line that they broke the Cold Storage Trust. It was an open winter in the West, so the cornfed cow kept on the job until she broke the Butter Trust.

"For a year prices have been hammered down by packers—the men who usually are accused of putting them up.

"The packers openly charge retailers and jobbers with levying a robber tribute on the public, and assert they oppose the decline in prices.

"Although the United States harvested but an average crop of wheat—690,000,000 bushels—competing countries had enormous crops. Wheat has declined 25 cents a bushel in four months and cash wheat is now selling at 87 cents, the lowest in four years. Flour is down $1.50 a barrel. The greatest acreage of winter wheat ever sown is, according to all reports, coming through the winter in the best possible condition. All this makes for low prices."

The above is cheering news for the common people, who have been struggling with the problem of the cost of living during the past several years. It is to be hoped that the predictions of the packers and food manufacturers will materialize and that lower prices for food supplies will continue for an "indefinite period."

The cost of living has risen to dizzy altitudes. It has been outrageously high—everywhere, throughout the country. Wages and salaries did not increase in proportion to the cost of commodities and the necessities of life, and the result was genuine hardship for wage earners and salaried men and their families, as well as for the proprietors of businesses of modest proportions. The cost of living must go down, or wages and salaries must go up. This has been the opinion of millions of conservative thinkers for several years past. The assurance that the cost of living is to go down comes with force and will be received by the masses with something akin to the feelings with which the Southern darky contemplates the near approach of the watermelon season.

The cost of living has not appreciably decreased in the South as yet. Being further from the main base of food supplies than most sections of the country, it is natural to suppose that this section will be the last to feel the effects of reduced prices for packing house products and grain, the greater portion of which, as sold in the markets of the South, come from the middle West and the Northwest. If lower prices continue permanently, however, we of the South will come into our share of this new kind of prosperity by and by.

For the perpetuation of general prosperity it is to be hoped that food prices will not fall so low as to work a hardship on the cattle growers and grain producers. Let us have good prices all along the line and as large a measure of prosperity as possible for all classes, without injuring the prosperity of any class. The farmers are entitled to fair prices and good profits for their products. In fact, no class of our citizenry is entitled to a greater measure of prosperity. Agriculture is the backbone of the nation. Give the farmers a chance; may the prices of their products always be sufficiently remunerative. The trouble has been in the past, it is said, that the farmers of the section producing the greater part of the meats and grain handled by the packing houses and food manufacttirers have not been receiving their proportion of the high prices consumers have been forced to pay for food products. Big profits have been going into the coffers of the various so-called food trusts, while the producers have been forced to take small profits. If this be true, it is questionable as to how much of the profits of foodstuffs at lower prices will find their way into the hands of the producers. Men who believe in the square deal desire to see the farmer and stock grower, as well as the packer and middle man, secure fair returns; and few citizens would care to eat cheap bread and meat produced by farmers who did not realize a fajr return from the sale of their products.

The equalization of the profits of production and distribution is one of the vital problems of the day, and will have to be adjusted at the no distant time.

In this connection it can be said that the farmers of the South can settle the high cost of living problem for themselves. The South can produce anything any other section of the country produces; and while some of the cereals do not yield so abundantly in the cotton belt as in other sections of the country, there is not a Southern State in which the soil cannot be made to produce all the wheat, corn and oats, as well as the hay, vegetables and fruits needed for consumption by its population.

When Southern farmers feed themselves and their stock, without recourse to the packing houses and granaries of the West, the "hallelujah time" will be at high tide in this section. This they can do, and more—they can feed all the people of all the towns and cities of the South. In the day when this is accomplished the South will be the most independent section of country on the globe; and within half a century after its realization, the South will be the wealthiest and most populous country of equal area in the world.

Southern farmers are coming into their own, along with all other classes of people in the Southland. They are learning how to diversify agricultural production; how to raise their supplies at home, how to market the surplus; how to live well and grow independent—many of them rich.

Let Southern farmers persevere in their efforts to help solve the high cost of living problem for themselves and for the urban population of this section.

New York World represents Speaker Cannon as the only mourner at the grave of the Sixty-first Congress. Uncle Joe's sorrow is of a purely personal nature, however.

Senator Joseph W. Bailey of the great State of Texas was not resigned long. Joe soon concluded that he preferred to be resigned to the fate of a United States Senator for a while longer.

Somebody wants to know if Kentuckians are not afraid that a certain line of conduct will foster feuds. Thought everybody was aware of the fact that Kentuckians are afraid of nothing but water for drinking purposes.

The editor of the Wilmington Star writes of matters astronomical like a professional, which is in accordance with the fitness of things, as he doubtless expends much thought and effort on one of the brightest orbs in the constellation of North Carolina journals.

The Sixty-first Congress ended in a near-riot. The members appeared to resent the President's action in giving final notice that the Sixty-second Congress would be called in extra session on April 4th, and many of them were feeling cross and mean from other causes. The riotous disorder was so great that it is said the record of the close of the first Reed Congress was left far behind.

Marie Louise Elkins, granddaughter o fthe late William L. Elkins, the Philadelphia traction magnate, cannot manage to pay her personal expenses with ten thousand dollars per year. Marie wants twenty thousand, and her mother makes a plea to the court for this allowance, saying that a young woman moving in Marie Louise's set cannot possibly travel on this allowance. Marie's grandfather left her an income of $80,000 anuually, but the trustees are to be the judges of the amount she is to receive yearly. By all means, Marie Louise ought to have $20,000. Let her spend the money, and thereby put it in circulation.

"Why don't the 'rising young man' keep on rising?" asks the Wilmington Star. He does, if he is a real "rising young man." The young man who is getting on and going up in the world never stops in his career if his character is of the right kind and his attainments are worthy. One of the most encouraging and stimulating facts about life is that there is always work to do and always other worlds to conquer for the man who lives wisely, labors joyously and develops the best in his nature. Let the "rising young man" rise—rise by the might of his own brain or brawn, rise by his own efforts, rise by making use of his talents and natural ability, rise on the pyramid of a character founded on the bed-rock of right living.

WHAT NORTH CAROLINA EDITORS ARE SAYING.

The Magnanimity of Dr. Mebane.

In the exercises attending the presentation of a silk flag to the Democrats of Rockingham county, a very pretty tribute was paid to Dr. George A. Mebane, who gave Major Charles M. Stedman such a close race for the nomination for Congress from the Fifth district. In the course of his presentation remarks, Mr. A. Wayland Cooke said: "I desire also to thank Dr. George A. Mebane for his great service, his encouragement, his zeal and faithfulness in this fight. During one of the most bitter contested nominations ever witnessed in the State, in which he was a central figure, he had at no time anything but kindness to say of anyone. No bitterness pervaded his soul. Even whilst the fight was being waged he met his political opponents with such an open, frank countenance and splendid cordiality, that the memory of it lingers with many of them still, and after having yielded victory to Guilford's white-plumed knight, he sulked not, but even on his return to his home from the scene of another triumph, raised the hue and cry, 'To your tents, O Israel.'" It is a fact that very few defeated candidates acquitted themselves more handsomely than did Dr. Mebane. His Democracy has been often tested, but has been always found true.—Charlotte Chronicle.

Times and Advertising.

A business is so quickly and severely affected by adverse financial conditions, as that of the newspaper. Merchants may complain, wage earners feel it, all kinds of trades and banks tell their troubles, but the newspaper must accept bad conditions, pay for them in their cost of maintenance that goes on practically the same with good or bad times, and not show the distress signal. Any bad local condition, any serious state or national situation, financial, commercial, social, and the press must declare for the optomistic side.

Just at present, while here and there are signs of what financiers declare to be the '1907 depression' remaining, there are other signs that indicate much more on the side of better general conditions, that may not be declared prosperity times, yet point to an increasing betterment of trade conditions. One sign particularly, that of greatly increased advertising inquiriy, that usually ushers in a period of trade activity and industrial development. It is not alone that development companies are willing spenders for advertising to promote new projects. But substantial and established commercial houses are advancing their advertising lines. In addition, there is a municipal advertising movement everywhere, that is as active as that of trade houses, a class of advertising unknown a few years ago. Going further, the railroads are in for advertising as never before. Some years ago there were a few railroads that spent in the hundreds of thousands, annually, today every railroad has its advertising department that is not limited to circulars and pamphlets, but employs big newspaper space, and this in publications way beyond their own lines. With all this advertising there must be stimulation in every trade and industry. Every individual cannot help being stirred into increased action, whatever his business.

Backbone in the White House.

There has been no uncertainty in the attitude of President Taft toward Canadian reciprocity and the extra session. He took his position promptly and he has held it with commendable firmness. Neither regulars nor progressives have been able to move him. In this policy he has had the support of the people. While the doomed old guard has urged the danger to party of calling a Democratic Congress, and while the self-styled progressives have balked at the first practical step toward true progress, the President has adhered to principles, promises and people. It is a combination which ultimately must triumph.—New York World.

Conquering a Critic.

William Simpson, a British artist, who accompanied the army during the Crimean war, said that Lord Cardigan, the commander, examined his early sketches of Balaklava with "a vacant stare," curtly remarking, "It is all wrong." Still Simpson persevered and was rewarded in the end "with the expression of Lord Cardigan's highest admiration."

"The real truth was," Simpson adds in his simple way, "that in the last sketch I had taken greater care than in the first two to make his lordship conspicuous in the front of the brigade."

The Curious Opossum.

The American opossum is one of the most curious animals living in the United States. It is the only one that carries its young in a pouch, like the kangaroo. It is the only animal that can feign death perfectly. It is remarkable for hanging by its tail, like a monkey. It has hands resembling those of a human being. Its snout is like a hog's, while its mouth is liberally furnished with teeth. Its eyes are like a rat's, and it hisses like a snake. —New York Herald.

The Beautiful Bridge.

Popular love of art may be carried too far. The author of "Charles Bourbon, Constable of France," tells us that on the occasion of the sack of Rome the citizens refused to secure their safety by taking the advice of their captain, Reuzo da Cerl, and cutting the bridges Ponte Quattro Capi and Ponte Sisto. The people declined on the ground that they were "too beautiful."

Life.

Life is not made up of great sacrifices or duties, but of little things, of which smiles and kindness and small obligations given habitually are what win and preserve the heart.

The fishing line will soon be the popular chord.

The Voice of Mary Etta

It Proves a Safeguard In Time of Need

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

"Never mind, Ben," encouraged Mary Etta as her husband shrugged into his overcoat and picked up his hat, "everything will come out all right in the end. All the other farmers in the county have met with the same failure that we have, only you've got the best of most of them. You've got your trade to fall back on."

The sullen expression deepened on Ben Madison's handsome face. "It isn't so easy going back to work under a foreman after being my own boss for five years," he said bitterly.

Mary Etta winced. "I know it, dear. But suppose you didn't have a trade and couldn't make up this winter for your losses of last summer. Mr. Fray has promised you steady work at $2.50—that's $15 a week. Why, it will pay the interest and taxes for a year, besides paying all our living expenses and giving you a splendid start for the spring. You might be able to buy another cow."

"I know all the advantages," said Ben impatiently. "But you don't understand how I feel about it, Mary Etta! It's sort of admitting I've failed on the farm, just as your father said I would."

His wife's eyes flashed strangely. "You don't understand father, dear. He has already admitted he was mistaken in his estimate of you, for you have done splendidly—no one can deny that—and who could prevent the long drought we have suffered? I know he'd think it was splendid of you to pitch in and make the farm pay by doing everything you could this winter."

Ben turned away, a discouraged droop to his shoulders. Of course Mary Etta didn't know that he had gone to her father the night before and asked him for a loan of $500 to tide them over the winter and spring—in fact, until his crops would begin to pay along in May and June, for his market garden and forcing house had proved a very paying branch of the Madison farm.

He reddened resentfully as he remembered how old Peter Lloyd's white eyebrows had lifted incredulously when his son-in-law asked for the loan. "No, Ben," Peter had said slowly; "I'm not saying I ain't got the money, for I have, but I guess I'll keep it awhile longer. If Mary Etta was a widow, now, and needed my help it would be different. You're a strong man, and you've done well so far. It would only weaken you to borrow this money of me. Find a way out yourself. You'll be the better off for it in the end, and I wish you good luck. If you was sick or there was an accident of some kind I'd be the first one on hand to help you out. As it is, you and Mary Etta have started out for yourselves, and you're both capable of fighting it out to the end—same as the rest of us have to do."

Ben Madison thought of this conversation with increasing anger as he trudged down the frosty road that led to Fray's planing mill. The only alternative left to him had been to seek a job at Fray's, where its owner had told him there were sufficient orders ahead to keep a good workman like Ben busy all winter making sashes and blinds for the spring building trade. Now he was going down to tell Fray he would take the job. There were others waiting for the opportunity, but Fray had promised Ben the first chance.

When he reached the road that turned down to the mill he hesitated and then walked slowly on, head down, moodily thinking. At last he came to the railroad station, where a few loungers awaited the passing of the noon train. Ben looked down the shining length of track that led to the city beyond. There might be opportunities for other work than that he had left behind when he married Mary Etta five years ago. He had hated the bench work, the long hours and the carrying of the dinner pail. They chafed his Madison pride. Ben was the last of his family, and all the pride of the Madisons seemed concentrated in this young man with the strong, broad shoulders and the bitterly drooping mouth, who imagined he had made a failure of life.

As the whistle of the approaching train shrieked from some distant crossing Ben Madison seemed to make up his mind to some course of action. He glanced quickly at the loungers congregated about the station stove and stepped out of the station house and walked up the track to the raised platform where there was a little heap of baggage. He pulled his hat down over his eyes and muttered under his breath: "I just can't go back to the bench again. I'll get something to do in the city and send for Mary Etta to come. I can write to her when I get there and tell her how it is. She'll understand."

When he was in the train he tried to persuade himself that Mary Etta would understand just how he felt and look on his decision in exactly the same manner that he did. Mary Etta had pride too. He had taken her from a comfortable home, where as the only daughter of a well to do farmer she had had little hard work and many luxuries. All of these things she had gladly given up to marry the man she loved, and Ben prided himself on the fact that by the work of his hands Mary Etta had not had to do as much drudgery as many of his neighbors' wives. She had help in her housecleaning, and whenever there was extra work to be done she had a woman to do her washing and ironing and scrubbing. And yet Mary Etta looked very tired this fall. Indeed, there was a faded look about her usually blooming face that Ben did not understand and secretly worried about. And yet his anxiety was not so great as his pride. He could support his wife, but he would do it in his own way. They would board all winter in the city where he could get fine wages, and in the spring they would return to the farm.

Once in the city streets he did not know which way to turn to look for work. By the time he had bought a morning newspaper and hunted its columns in vain for advertisements requiring the especial services he had to offer he was ravenously hungry. When he had appeased his healthy appetite he was troubled at the inroads made upon his little store of money, and this money had been a sum that Mary Etta had produced from some secret hiding place, for their money in the savings bank had been drawn upon to meet necessary expenses.

Mary Etta was a wonderful manager he thought as he left the eating place and walked aimlessly down the street. She had planned and contrived all through the autumn months while the dread of going back to the bench still hung like a dark cloud over him.

He paused in front of a gaudily painted doorway and read the posters of a moving picture show. In a few moments he had yielded to the temptation to enter and found himself seated well down in front in the long, narrow theater. At the moment there were being produced the pictures of a thrilling rescue from flames as a tall tenement house burned.

Ben watched breathlessly and cheered as heartily as the rest when the last picture faded away. He did not look at the card announcing the next production. The theater was warm, and he was removing his overcoat.

When he looked up he heard the faintly familiar sounds of an organ reproduced from a large phonograph on the stage, and there flashed into view on the curtain a scene that took his breath away and left him sitting in stunned silence while it lasted.

Before him was the interior of the village church at home, rows and rows of familiar heads, while up in the pulpit the thin, angular form of the new minister sat stiffly on the red velvet sofa, while the choir grouped on his left were singing.

He saw his own grave face beside young Harry Fray, the tenor. He saw Mrs. Phillips, the pastor's wife, and Mary Etta. Mary Etta, looking very sweet and girlish, was singing, and the others should have been joining in the refrain, for their mouths were opened. But it was only Mary Etta who sang, her sweet, high voice rising like that of an angel to the very roof of the church even now as it was reproduced from the phonograph and floated above the heads of the mixed audience, who hung breathlessly upon every word she sang. Now and then there was a strangled sob as the meaning of the song was borne to the hearts of the hearers and touched some tender chord.

Ben listened, seeming to hear the broken trill of a robin from the churchyard outside, as had happened the last time Mary Etta had sung that old Scotch hymn "My Ain Countrie:"

I am far frae my hame, an' I'm weary aftenwhiles
For the langed for hame bringing an' my Faither's welcome smiles,
An' I'll ne'er be fu' content until mine een do see
The gowden gates o' heav'n an' my ain countrie.

When the last note had died away amid a silence that was more eloquent than the noisiest applause Ben found his way to the management of the theater and was sent to the people from whom the picture films had been purchased. There, after many explanations and some delay, he was informed that the pastor had granted permission for the picture to be taken from the back gallery the spring before and that Mary Etta had been approached and asked to sing the song into a phonograph. This she had at first refused to do, and then, tempted by the money offered, she had consented and had made several trips to the city to sing many other well known songs to be reproduced for the entertainment of the public.

That explained to Ben Madison how it was that in spite of the scant returns from the farm that summer there had always been plenty on his table, while his store bills had been promptly met. The shadow in Mary Etta's face was probably the reflection of her troubled conscience, for her gentle heart must have suffered at deceiving her proud young husband.

Thrilled with self contempt, Ben Madison hurried home on the last train that night and awoke the astonished Mr. Fray from his early sleep. Then he went on to his home, where Mary Etta was waiting anxiously for his return.

"Hurray!" cried Ben joyously. "I got the job all right, Mary Etta. I'm going to work tomorrow morning. You got something for my lunch?"

"Lots," said Mary Etta, smiling through her tears. "Do you mind going back to the bench, dear?" she asked.

Then it was that Ben told her of his day's experience. "Gee, Mary Etta," he said in wonder as he concluded, "I don't see how you stood my foolish pride as long as you did! But you're the stuff. My pride's changed to another kind, and I'll work my fingers off one way or another till we pull out."

"Why, I loved you, Ben," said Mary contentedly. "That's why it was easy to do."

"You'll see how much I love you, then," threatened her husband happily.

Explosives In Your Body.

The human body contains no fewer than four substances which are so inflammable that in a pure state they will "go off" by spontaneous combustion. For instance, there is phosphorus. The body of a person weighing 120 pounds contains twenty-two ounces of this substance, which, as everybody knows, readily takes fire of its own accord if exposed to the air. It is combined with lime to make the bones, taking the form of phosphate lime. The body of a human being weighing 120 pounds contains nearly one and a half ounces of magnesium, two ounces of sodium and nearly two and a half ounces of potassium. The first of these, a substance of silvery whiteness, is so readily and fiercely combustible that it has to be kept tightly corked in bottles to prevent it from igniting of its own accord. Sodium will take fire if thrown into water, and so likewise will potassium—the latter with great violence, finally exploding and throwing a shower of sparks into the air.—New York World.

Hospital Fighters.

Into a hospital came two men with battered faces.

"Street fight?" said the surgeon in charge.

It was. Under the doctor's directions orderlies moved beds and patients around until the newcomers were separated the length of the ward.

"In this case that precaution may not be necessary," he said, "but after a street brawl it very often is. Before we learned the peculiarities of those people it happened more than once that two men who were mortal enemies were brought in and laid out side by side. Each saw his advantage and was foxy enough to keep still until both were left alone in adjoining cots; then they sailed into each other tooth and nail, trying to finish the job that had been interrupted in the street. Once or twice they nearly succeeded. Now chance patients with pugilistic tendencies are placed so far apart that a neighborly interchange of uppercuts is out of the question.—New York Press.

CROUP TALK TO MOTHERS.

All the Croup Syrups and some of the boasted External applications CONTAIN OPIUM and should not be used. Read the labels before using. Vick's Croup and Penumonia Salve contains NO OPIATE and is harmless and relieves in 15 minutes by its STIMULATING VAPORS and OUTSIDE STIMULATION.

Adam sniffed at the book farmer.

The Word "Chap."

"Chap" is simply an abbreviation of chapman, the merchant of former days, and is derived from the Anglo-Saxon "ceap," a bargain. The word almost brings before us the loud voiced "cheap Jack" as he cries his wares in the cheaping or market. Chap seems to have come into common use at the end of the sixteenth century and is rarely mentioned in books before 1700. Johnson does not recognize it, though Steele uses it in 1712 in the Spectator ("If you want to sell, here is your chap"), and it is found in Bailey's Dictionary, 1731. Its original meaning of a buyer or seller still lingers in the dialects of many counties. Coupled with the adjectives old, young, little, poor, it was and is used in familiar language, as is its relative, a queer "customer." Todd, 1818, affirms that a good chap meant one to whom credit might be given, whereas not qualified by good it was a term of contempt.—London Standard.

Warning to Railroad Men

Look out for severe and even dangerous kidney and bladder trouble resulting from years of railroading. Geo. E. Bell, 639 Third St., Fort Wayne, Ind., was many years a conductor on the Nickel Plate. He says: "Twenty years of railroading left my kidneys in terrible condition. There was a continual pain across my back and hips and my kidneys gave me much distress, and the action of my bladder was frequent and most painful. I got a supply of Foley Kidney Pills and the first bottle made a wonderful improvement and four bottles cured me completely. Since being cured I have recommended Foley Kidney Pills to many of my railroad friends." Howard Gardner.

A Special Medicine For Kidney Ailments.

Many elderly people have found in Foley's Kidney Remedy a quick relief and permanent benefit from kidney and bladder ailments and from annoying urinary irregularities due to advancing years. Isaac N. Regan, Farmer, Mo., says: "Foley's Kidney Remedy effected a complete cure in my case and I want others to know of it."—Howard Gardner.

Fortunately for most of us, common sense isn't fashionable.

Power of Nature's Beauty.

Have you never felt the marvelous power of beauty in nature? If not you have missed one of the most exquisite joys in life, says Orison Swett Marden in Success Magazine. I was once going through the Yosemite valley, and after riding 100 miles in a stagecoach over rough mountain roads I was so completely exhausted that it did not seem as though I could keep my seat while we traveled over the ten more miles which would bring us to our destination. But on looking down from the top of the mountain I caught a glimpse of the celebrated Yosemite falls and the surrounding scenery just as the sun broke through the clouds, and there was revealed a picture of such rare beauty and marvelous picturesqueness that every particle of fatigue, brain fag and muscle weariness departed in an instant. My whole soul thrilled with a winged sense of sublimity, grandeur and beauty which I had never experienced before and which I can never forget. I felt a spiritual uplift which brought tears of joy to my eyes.

A Delayed Execution.

An eighteenth century execution on Kennington common was stopped for a time owing to a strange cause. On Aug. 19, 1763, two days before the date of the execution, a heavy fog came over London, accompanied by thunder and lightning and torrents of rain. These conditions lasted for nearly forty-eight hours, and many people believed that the last day had arrived. When the time fixed for the execution arrived the assembled crowd cried shame on the sheriff for hanging a man when the world was coming to an end. As he persisted in his preparations they burst through the barriers and stopped the proceedings, shouting that the culprit might as well wait a few minutes, when the grand summons would come to all. The sheriff had to obtain the assistance of a force of soldiers before the execution could be carried out.

Attacks School Principal.

A severe attack on school principal, Chas. B. Allen, of Sylvania, Ga., is thus told by him. "For more than three years," he writes, "I suffered indescribable torture from rheumatism, liver and stomach trouble and diseased kidneys. All remedies failed till I used Electric Bitters, but four bottles of this wonderful remedy cured me completely." Such results are common. Thousands bless them for curing stomach trouble, female complaints, kidney disorders, biliousness, and for new health and vigor. Try them. Only 50c. at Fariss-Klutz Drug Co.

"Foley's Honey and Tar is the best cough remedy I ever used as it quickly stopped a severe cough that had long troubled me," says J. W. Kuhn, Princeton, Nebr. Just so quickly and surely it acts in all cases of coughs, colds, lagrippe and lung trouble. Refuse substitutes. Howard Gardner.

HIDDEN DANGERS.

Nature Gives Timely Warnings That No Greensboro Citizen Can Afford to Ignore.

DANGER SIGNAL NO. 1 comes from the kidney secretions. They will warn you when the kidneys are sick. Well kidneys excrete a clear, amber fluid. Sick kidneys send out a thin, pale and foamy, or a thick, red, ill-smelling urine, full of sediment and irregular of passage.

DANGER SIGNAL NO 2 comes from the back. Back pains, dull and heavy, or sharp and acute, tell you of sick kidneys and warn you of the approach of dropsy, gravel and Bright's disease. Doan's Kidney Pills help sick kidneys. Here is proof in the statement of a nearby resident.

J. A. Harder, Davis St., Burlington, N. C., says: "I was troubled a great deal by backache and dull pains through my loins and sides. I often noticed that the kidney secretions were unnatural and passed entirely too frequently. Upon a friend's advice, I decided to try Doan's Kidney Pills and procured a box. I had used them but a short time before my kidneys were restored to their normal condition. I heartily recommend Doan's Kidney Pills to other kidney sufferers."

A STAMP HOAX.

The Story That Went With the Elephant's Beak Issue.

Stamp collecting is a peculiar but a fascinating hobby, and it is said that as many as 9,000,000 in all the world own it as a hobby. Germany, France, Austria, England and France rank in the order named in the number of stamp collectors they contain.

"The elephant's beak hoax" is one of the best jokes ever played at the expense of collectors. It was worked on a half dozen well known philatelists who were astonished by the announcement that a well known New York stamp collector had secured the only copy of a peculiar stamp later known as "the elephant stamp bill." This stamp bore as its central design the figure of an elephant with the beak and wings of a bird. This stamp, so the story went, was designed by a well known South American revolutionist who was about to overthrow the existing regime. The design on the stamp was meant to designate that the new ruler had the strength of an elephant and the swiftness of a bird. But alas for the plans of mice and men! His plot was discovered, and among the supplies seized were half a million of the stamps of the new and yet unborn republic. These were ordered destroyed. One of the soldiers had managed to smuggle about a hundred of these away, but he was finally caught and shot at daybreak. Before his execution, however, he had given one stamp to a little boy, and this had in some very reasonable and plausible way found the New York collector after many months.

The stamp was naturally of great price and would have brought a big sum had not several collectors compared notes and found that each had in his possession on approval the only elephant bill stamp in existence. In this way the interesting hoax was discovered.—New York Mail.

KNEW TOO MUCH.

Tennyson's Father Had to Fly For His Life From Russia.

Shortly after the assassination of Emperor Paul of Russia, Tennyson, the father of the poet, dined with Lord St. Helens, the British ambassador, in Moscow. Several Russian officers of high rank whose names he did not know were also guests. During dinner a guarded reference was made to the emperor's death.

"Why do you speak so gingerly about a matter so notorious?" cried Tennyson impulsively, leaning across his neighbor, a Russian whose breast was covered with orders. "We know very well in England that the Emperor Paul was murdered. Count Zoboff knocked him down and Benningsen and Count Pahlen strangled him."

There was a strained silence; then the ambassador abruptly changed the subject. As the guests filed out into an adjoining room Lord St. Helens drew Tennyson aside. "Don't go into the next room," he whispered, "but fly for your life. The man next you, across whose breast you leaned, was Count Pahlen, and Zoboff was also at the table."

He gave a few hurried directions, and Tennyson rushed off, threw his clothes into a portmanteau and fled behind fast horses to Odessa, still in evening garb, though the cold was intense. He lay hidden for weeks and at last, in the disguise of a servant, was smuggled on board an English frigate.

Remarkable Violin Test.

An ingenious test of old and new violins, in which an instrument of modern make was voted the finest, has been made in Paris. During the performance both critics and performers were in complete darkness, so that it was impossible to see which one of the seven violins selected for the test was being played. Then immediately after being used the instrument was placed under a cloth, and the lights were turned on for a few moments to enable the critics to write down the votes. All the violins were played by two musicians of high standing, and the compositions were written especially for the test. The two violinists tried to bring out the best in each violin, and the result, decided by the votes, was interesting. The modern make of violin led the list with 102 votes, and its nearest rival for favor was a Stradivarius with 96 votes. Other old and famous makes of violins received 82, 85, 83, 82 and 80.—London Telegraph.

Dirt and Death.

When a celebrated Paris physician was asked how the city could prevent the coming of a plague then ravaging other European places he answered, "Boil your ice!" That tersely called attention to the necessity of utter cleanliness and that even ice made from impure water carried disease.

"Yellow fever," said Henry Ward Beecher, "is God Almighty's opinion of dirt." The chief contributing cause toward modern efficiency in surgery is that surgeons have learned to keep clean. Nothing is so spotless as a good hospital. Everything is boiled and sterilized—beds, instruments, clothing, washrags, floors, hands and finger nails. That is why they save lives there. Nobody would die if he could keep perfectly clean. Death is the final triumph of dirt.—Chicago Tribune.

He Understood the People.

One of Jay Gould's campaigns as a dealer in railways was with the Wabash system of railroads. He got control and after effecting a reorganization which increased the capital stock and also the bonded debt sold them out. It is related of him at this time that an associate said to him, "Mr. Gould, don't you think you are bonding this much higher than the property will stand?" "That may be," answered he, "but the American people are mighty partial to bonds."

The Word "Gaiters."

Episcopal gaiters cannot date from a very remote antiquity. The very word "gaiters" is almost a newcomer to the language. Johnson's Dictionary does not recognize its existence. It does not occur before 1760, and even in 1802 a military dictionary had to define it as "a sort of spatterdashes." "Guetre," however, the French original, goes back at least to the fifteenth century, and the origin of that is lost, though etymologists compare all sorts of words in all sorts of languages, including an old German word for a baby's christening cloth. The one certainty is that gaiters has nothing to do with gait in spite of the punning line in the "Rejected Addresses"—"Lax in their gaiters, laxer in their gait."—London Standard.

The Self Sacrifice of Fadzeau.

A fine historical dog story is recalled by Mr. Edwin Noble in "The Dog Lover's Book." The incident is connected with the flight of William Wallace to the mountains after Erneside, accompanied by only sixteen followers, among whom was one named Fadzeau. When the baying of the bloodhounds was heard announcing the coming of the English Fadzeau refused to go any farther, affecting weariness, and Wallace, suspecting him of traitorous intentions, killed him. When the English came up the hounds stayed upon the dead body and refused to follow beyond the stains of blood.

He Beat Her.

A woman said to the railway station ticket agent angrily:

"Look here, sir, I've been standing before this window twenty-five minutes!"

The agent, a gray, withered little man, answered gently:

Has Millions of Friends.

How would you like to number your friends by millions as Bucklen's Arnica Salve does? Its astounding cures in the past forty years made them. It's the best Salve in the world for sores, ulcers, eczema, burns, boils, scalds, cuts, corns, sore eyes, sprains, swellings, bruises, cold sores. Has no equal for piles. 25c. at Fariss-Klutz Drug Co.

Mixed Emotions.

A Bostonian tells of a clean, well set up young Irishman who formerly saw service in the British navy, but who is now engaged in business at the Hub.

"When are you going to get freedom in Ireland, John?" the Bostonian once idly asked.

"The only way that we'll get freedom in ould Ireland," said the Celt, "will be if France an' Russia an' Germany an' Austria an' maybe Italy—if they would all join together to give those blackguards of English a rare ould batin'. That's the only way, sir, we'll get home rule."

Then as he looked cautiously about a twinkle of cunning was added to his expression. "An' the whole lot of 'em together couldn't do it, sir. Oh, it's the grand navy we've got!"—Lippincott's Magazine.

The Talmud.

The Talmud is the compendium of ancient Jewish oral, or unwritten, law, as distinguished from the Pentateuch, or written, law. Its origin is coeval with the return of the Jewish people from the Babylonian captivity, 536 B. C. Its compilation in Hebrew was begun by the scribes, and by their successors the work was carried on till 220 B. C. The Talmud is a combination of prose and poetry and contains two elements, legal and legendary. Its morality resembles that of the New Testament, and its philosophy reminds us very forcibly of that of the great Plato.—New York American.

A Fresh Egg.

An English food expert, said in a recent lecture:

"The secret of health is two meals a day with an occasional fast. But people won't avail themselves of this superb secret. It is too unpleasant—like the fresh egg. A gentleman, after cutting the top off a soft boiled egg, summoned the waiter and said:

"'Waiter, take this egg back to the kitchen, wring its neck, and grill it for me.'"

SALVATION ARMY CAMPS

For Mothers and Children.

There are many tired mothers who have sickly children who were not fortunate enough to be given such an outing and we ask those mothers as a duty to themselves and their children to read the two following letters:

Mrs. Rose Hawthorne Lathrop, who has done so much good among the children of New York City, says: "Little children seem to delight in taking Vinol. In my work among the destitute sick, I give Vinol in many cases where it would be impossible to give cod liver oil in any other form, on account of the extreme weakness of the patient's stomach. I have known Vinol to restore appetite and infuse new life in many cases of sick women and children when everything else failed."

Mrs. C. W. Stump, Canton, Ohio, says: "I wish I could induce every mother who has a weak, sickly child to try the delicious cod liver preparation, Vinol, as it restored health and strength to our daughter after all else had failed."

Vinol is a boon to weak mothers and sickly children. If it fails to give satisfaction we will refund your money. Fariss-Klutz Drug Co., Greensboro, N. C.

Arrived Some Time Ago.

Ellen Terry says "the coming woman" is to be "the great, the complete, the abundant woman." Let her come, Ellen! Fact is, we are constrained to opine that she's already in our midst. —Shreveport Times.

Way to Get a Frost.

Those cold-storage speculators who are said to be worried by their overstocks and the high prices of ice might secure an unlimited amount of refrigerating by appealing to the public for sympathy.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Everybody Wins.

Seeing that we send four times as much produce into Canada as we receive from across the border, the panic of the "agricultural interests" over reciprocity is ludicrous in the extreme. It seems to be entirely forgotten that wherever we pull down a tariff bar Canada pulls one down on her side to match it. Both countries stand to win by the exchange and neither to lose.—Providence Bulletin.

Time Lost.

The worst thing about the rejection of the direct popular election of senators is the certainty that all the tiresome, time-consuming debate will be repeated in the next Congress. The failure of the resolution by the narrow margin of seven votes means that everything will have to be done over again, legislatively, from the beginning. It would have been the same had the Senate failed to vote on the question at this session, since all pending legislation dies with Congress.—Boston Transcript.

Profanity on the Stage.

There is a movement on foot in New York to prohibit the use of profanity on the stage. Many movements of similar character have been inaugurated and have died out without accomplishing anything beyond a little ephemeral notority for their promoters, but it is hoped this one will not be allowed to languish. The stage should be one of our most useful and successful educational institutions. It has the opportunity to impress good lessons upon plastic minds which can be reached in no other way. Its teachings are powerful and lasting, and are good or evil as they are clean, wholesome and uplifting or the reverse. But of the lessons they do or can teach no other is so senseless, so useless, as profanity. It is neither impressive nor ornate; merely low, vulgar and repulsive. Profanity denotes the lack of originality and power of expression in its user. It is a uerformance in which the most learned linguist and most eloquent advocate is at a disadvantage in a contest with an ignorant and untutoed roustabout. Why, then, should it be allowed to mar plays that are intended for the ears of the young, the refined, the intelligent? No reason can be found in either good sense or good sense or good morals. Therefore, all plays should be purged of their profanity before being allowed production, and it is hoped the movement started in New York will be carried to a successful conclusion.—Baltimore Sun.
